10th Sunday in Ordinary Time

First Reading: 1 Kings 17: 17-24

Second Reading: Galatians 1: 11-14A, 15AC, 16A, 17, 19

Gospel: Luke 7: 11-17

Today's Gospel story is about a widow who is accompanying the funeral procession of her only son, and she is a widow. These are two important elements, her being a widow and having only one son who is now dead. Having a husband and having a son were signs of God's blessing a woman in the times of Jesus. Jesus is moved by the sight and approaches the dead man. "Young man, I tell you, arise." As Elijah rises, Jesus gave the mother back her son who began speaking. All who heard him and saw what Jesus had done, responded in great proclamations of faith that God had visited his people. The Jewish telegram service began sending reports of this Jesus who is now living out exactly what he announced he would be doing when he unrolled the scroll in his hometown. He was going to be the fulfillment of all the predictions of the coming Anointed One. Here's a little pondering I have been doing about this man who was raised from death and began speaking. We know that the fame of Jesus was spreading throughout Israel. I was reflecting about how exactly did the raised-man live out his life. Did he become a celebrity and keep talking about his short trip to the "other side"? Was it all about him? There is much about being personal in our relationship with Jesus. There can be a subtle kind of selfishness in our spirituality. Our prayer can be all about ourselves, all about me. We do want to be better, more virtuous, trusting and such. We can become celebrities in our own prayerful way. It is attractive of course; nobody is more interesting to us than ourselves. I offer that our prayer, our recovery, our relationship with Jesus is completed and perfected by how we are returned to community, to all of ourselves. The more we have of ourselves, the more we are ourselves in relationship with others.
